

Writing a composition - paragraph writing

Sharpening my pencils, cleaning my desk, looking up random stuff online, texting with friends or just staring out of the window - these are all things I do when I'm supposed to do my homework. Psychology has a scary-sounding word for this kind of behaviour: procrastination. Sometimes I ask myself if this is something I should start worrying about.

On the one hand putting things off until the last minute is something that everybody does from time to time.

On the other hand procrastination can become a big problem, when it gets out of control.

So, in conclusion I'll definitely go online tonight to look up strategies on how to tackle my procrastination problem. That's if my procrastinating doesn't get in the way, of course. 😊